Mr. Abbott spoke in high praise of the work of William H. Whittaker, superintendent of the institution for the past four years. Edwin M. Abbott, of Philadelphia have visited many institutions. "We have visited many institutions," said Mr. Abbott, "and this is one of the few in which we found everybody working. The administration of the farm shows marked ability on the part of the superintendent. Then, the simplicity of the whole institution and the fact that it is practically self-supporting make it a model which Pennsylvania would de well to follow.

"The buildings are simple in construction, yet perfectly sanitary. The only objection would be on the part of the politicians who would see in such simply constructed buildings lack of opportunity for the graft which costly ones afford."
